MAUI AND THE COUNTY FAIR.

Maui county's first annual fair, to be held at Wailuku on November 30, December 1 and 2, is the subject of a sixteen-page special section printed with today's paper.

In looking over these pages, filled not only with news of the coming fair, but with articles and photographs covering a wide range of Maui subjects, the reader is struck forcibly with the far-reaching extent to which the Valley Isle has developed the theory of community cooperation. Perhaps nowhere else in the territory is this ideal so fully exemplified.

It is not confined to the towns, to any one class of people, or to any one section of this large and prosperous island. Over the whole extent of one of the most populous and busiest parts of the territory there hovers the spirit of community "team-work." The man of large affairs on Maui recognizes that he is giving the best return for what fortune has done for him if he shares his prosperity with the laborers in his employ and the less fortunate neighbors near his gates.

Maui is often referred to as the island of model plantations. The reason is not wholly one of mechanical efficiency. It is largely in the extraordinary degree to which the plantation managements have developed the health, comfort, recreation, wholesome enjoyment of their employes and of the employes of allied businesses.

All of this is done without the least bit of self-conscious cant. The plantation men assume no credit for it. They do it as part of their everyday work—and the everyday work of the Maui plantation man is a man-sized job. They do it because they believe in fair treatment of employes, and year by year they have gone further along the road of definite promotion of helpful community activities.

Maui has always been noted for this ability to "pull together" on important matters. No more striking example of team-work has been given in the territory than the manner in which the Valley Islanders rose to the grave emergency of last winter when a sudden flood swept down Iao Valley and caused the loss of a number of lives and a large destruction of property. The promptitude, quickness of thought and ability to grapple with new problems were no less marked than the common desire to help the unfortunate survivors who had been bereft of homes and often of families.

That same quality of rapid and concerted action has been demonstrated in the preparations for the first annual fair. Maui leaders have undertaken this fair with the finest kind of spirit. They will make it an unquestionable success.

Aside from articles concerning the coming fair, the special Maui section today deals somewhat with the tourist possibilities of this island of many beauties and attractions. The tourist possibilities are almost limitless. Until very recently, there was little sentiment on the island in favor of seeking tourists, but this has largely changed. With the development of adequate hotel facilities, Maui can care for the traveler as well as any island in the group, and through all the territory there has run an awakening appreciation of the value of the tourist trade, in which the Valley Isle now shares. Signs indicate that henceforward Maui will make a strong bid for tourist patronage, with corresponding activities on her own part to develop things for the tourist to do.

The County Fair offers an unusual opportunity for the people of the other islands to visit Maui. The fair itself will assemble more exhibits displaying the industries and resources of the islands than anything previous in island history. Without doubt it will be the "biggest ever." And the program is well filled with amusement and recreation features. Maui will offer a "good show" and pledge a "good time."

A CONTRACT IN THE ORIENT.

(From Daily Financial America.)

News of the contract for the construction by American interests of 1100 miles of standard gauge railroad for the Chinese government is especially welcome at a time when the waning influence, commercially and politically, of the United States in the Far East has become a conspicuous fact. The arrangement will aid substantially in keeping open that door in the Orient which, in the minds of many observers, was being narrowed against us.

That the Chinese government has placed this contract with American interests is significant. There is little question but what there have been influences busily at work to prevent, for political as well as commercial reasons, just such a deal. Political as well as commercial considerations no doubt led China to place the contract here. She has felt that this country was politically, yet unselfishly, her friends; she has doubted the political purposes of one, and perhaps two, of her neighbors.

The contract also offers ground for the conclusion that, while it may have aspects of a politically defensive character, it indicates, too, the existence of a fairly substantial, stable and progressive government in China. The character of the contract not only indicates this but should assist in making it an actuality. The work is to be done on a contract basis, which limits the total cost of work undertaken. The railroad lines will be built by the contractors on a percentage basis, thus largely, if not entirely, eliminating opportunities for governmental graft.

The American companies involved are to be congratulated both on the size of the contract and the nature of its terms, which apparently insure fair and square dealing by all concerned. The American business public has reason to feel gratified over the contract both for what it means as an individual transaction and as a developer of future business. A railroad of the length called for in the contract will have the effect of a magic wand in stimulating economic growth. The progress of the work, the determination of routes, etc., will be watched with deep interest by Americans—and by the world at large.

Signs are not wanting that the British government is beginning to realize some of the woeful mistakes it has made in Ireland. Major-General Sir John Maxwell, who has been in command of the British forces in the Emerald Isle, has been retired, and his place is to be taken by Gen. Sir Brian Mahon, now commanding the British forces on the west frontier of Egypt. General Maxwell was the officer who put down the Sinn Fein rebellion with such severity and such lack of intelligence. Even the indifferent English were moved to protest, and popular feeling in Ireland ran very high against him. General Mahon is of pure Irish descent and has a fine military record. The choice seems a good one.

When the social revolutionists propose more international marriages as a remedy for war they overlook the fact the royal houses of the European nations are more or less intimately related, and that the deepest chasm of hatred is that which lies between England and Germany, whose rulers are first cousins.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Another federal probe of the high cost of living is announced. The much-criticized Middleman don't worry, and the much-pitied Ultimate Consumer won't hope for anything but an official report which makes the valuable discovery that two and two very possibly amount to four.

There are not as many big league stars on the visiting baseball team as have been seen here at one time, but they play big league ball, whereas the last visit of the majors was productive of considerable of the "bush league" variety of entertainment.

With Col. Roosevelt coming out here in February it is a perfectly safe assumption that those fourteen original Bull Moosers will skip out of the political graveyard and organize themselves again.

We should say that the meeting of the Los Angeles boosters and the Hawaii boosters resulted in the scatteration of some ozone—yes, some ozone.

The city election is coming along next spring. It is not too early to begin thinking of likely candidates for various offices.

Germany announces a self-governing Poland. It is now in order for England to say that Ireland is perfectly free.

—JAMES W. ROBERTSON: The writer of the Advertiser's reference to the reception and ball held at the armory on Thursday evening lays particular stress to an incident which occurred at a quarter to 10, and is termed "the spectacular climax of the evening." The writer failed to note an incident which occurred a few minutes before 9 o'clock. At this hour Prince and Princess Kalaniana'ole entered the armory. As they, accompanied by their escort, approached the center of the hall the band played the Hawaiian national anthem; the hundreds of guests then present arose from their seats and remained standing until the royal party had taken their seats on the dais. This was to my mind the most impressive event of the evening.

PUBLIC WELFARE WORKERS THANKED

Honolulu, Nov. 16, 1916.

Editor Honolulu Star-Bulletin: Dear Sir: The Anti-Tuberculosis League of Hawaii takes this opportunity of publicly thanking Scout Commissioner Hayward and all the scout masters and scouts of Honolulu, as also the ladies and girls who so kindly helped in the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals on Saturday, November 11.

To both the Star-Bulletin and Advertiser the thanks of the league are due for help in advertising the sales. Yours truly, JAS. A. RATH.

OLD-FASHIONED ARTS TO BE REVIVED AT MAUI'S BIG FAIR

Fascinating and Useful Handiwork of "Our Grandmothers" Will Be Shown at Wailuku Event

The arts of our grandmothers are not dead. Visitors to Maui County's First Fair may feast upon the rich treasures of women's handiwork as never before.

From the historical old town of Lahaina will come some of the rarest and choicest exhibits of needlework seen in many a day. Among the most interesting is a bedspread knitted by a blind woman; a christening robe embroidered by a man, and two old and exquisitely embroidered collars loaned by a prominent resident.

Of special beauty and finer workmanship is a flannel bedspread, crocheted by another of our residents. The pattern was taken from an illustrated card eight by ten inches.

Another valuable loan is a patchwork quilt made by three old women away up in the Cumberland mountains. Sheets of beautiful cut-work, rarely seen in this country, will also be shown.

A unique "Bobby Burns" tea set, some beautiful luncheon sets, table covers, pillow cases, night gowns and yokes, centerpieces and dress scarfs of flannel; Madeira embroidery, drawn work, torchon lace and crochet of both antique and modern design will be shown in profusion.

But not only will the women of Lahaina and West Maui do their share, but the whole of Maui will make a representative exhibit of home needlework.

The arts and crafts of old Hawaii as well as the new will not be disappointing.

MRS. F. G. KRAUSS, Haiku, Maui.

E. W. CHRISTMAS BEGINS EXHIBIT AT UNIVERSITY CLUB NEXT MONDAY

E. W. Christmas, R. B. A., whose exhibition of paintings shortly after his arrival in Hawaii a number of months ago attracted much attention, is back in Honolulu after extended visits on the islands of Hawaii and Maui, particularly the latter, and next Monday will begin an exhibition of paintings and drawings at the University Club. The exhibit is under the club's auspices.

Announcement is made that the exhibit will run from Monday, November 20, to Thursday, November 30, open mornings from 9:30 to 11; afternoons, 2 to 4; evenings, 8 to 10, the entrance to the exhibit room being through the ladies' annex.

Christmas will show 14 oils and 39 watercolors, practically all of local scenes. He has several paintings made elsewhere which may also be hung. Among the subjects which are expected to attract particular attention are the following oils:

Night scene, Kilauea; day scene, Kilauea; "The Rainbow," Lahaina; "Aborigines' Camp," one of the few Australian paintings he will show; clouds on Kauhala mountains, Lahaina; bananas, Iao valley, Maui. Also the following water colors: Island of Lanai, from Lahaina beach; Kahoolawe; Sunset on Haleakala; West Maui mountains; The Needle, Iao valley.

The reputation of this artist is well established in Hawaii and his local work is quite up to the high standard of the paintings he brought with him. It is expected that the exhibition at the University Club will be well attended.

INVITATION COMMITTEE OF KALAKAUA DAY BALL IS THANKED BY MAYOR

Mayor John C. Lane, as chairman of the Kalakaua Day Committee, wishes to thank, through the Star-Bulletin, Princess David Kawanakoa and the ladies who worked with her, for their help in making Kalakaua Day, and particularly the grand reception and ball, a success. Their work of sending out the invitations is especially appreciated and their care that none was forgotten made the ball the great social event of the season.

A. P. TAYLOR NAMED AS COMMERCE AGENT FOR HAWAII DISTRICT

Albert P. Taylor, secretary of the Hawaii Promotion Committee, is the new commercial agent for the department of commerce in Hawaii. His appointment came on Friday from Washington, together with the oath of office and details regarding the work in Hawaii.

For some time Taylor has been a correspondent for the Commerce Reports, the official publication of the organization, and his many articles on Hawaii have been republished throughout America. He stated Friday that his work would be along the lines of promoting commerce and expected to begin his activities at once.

PROMINENT MANUFACTURER COMING TO HONOLULU SOON

Philias Poirier, chief clerk at the Moana Hotel, has received word to reserve an apartment in January for John H. Patterson, a prominent manufacturer and capitalist of Dayton, Ohio, who is planning a trip here with his wife. Patterson is president of the National Cash Register Company and received the decoration of the legion of honor from the French government during an exhibition of his company in 1900, for his company's industrial enterprise and especially for his efforts for the benefits of his employes.

HUGE OIL TRUCK BLOCKS TRAFFIC ON KING STREET

Considerable commotion was caused and quite a crowd assembled when one of the rear wheels in a team of four attached to a huge oil tank truck fell at the King street entrance to the alleyway behind the Young Hotel on Friday. The huge tank projected across the street and blocked traffic for some time until the animal, which was more scared than hurt, could be unhitched and righted.

PRIVATE AFFAIRS

Need No Advertising But All Business

Needs Paid Publicity.

If you aim to run your business as a private affair regarding which no one but yourself should know anything, you have no need for publicity.

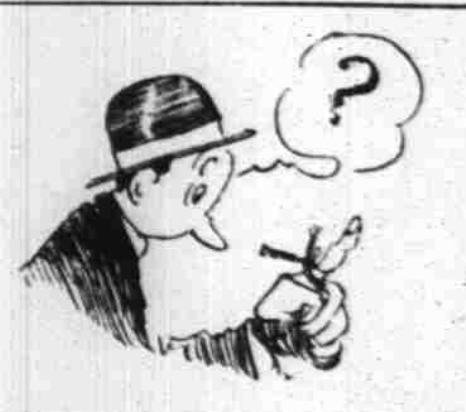

If you are in Business and expect to do business you cannot conduct your enterprise without publicity. As well expect to live without a heart.

Some People and Corporations think they can run their particular business as a private affair.

Then One Day They Wake up to discover that either no one knows they exist or that they are generously misunderstood.

If you are doing anything worth while you need paid publicity.
